General Staff Issues Orders
To Commanders In
The Field

TROOPS ON THE MARCH

Hungarian Troops Complete
The Crossing of Ruthania,
Say Dispatches

BERLIN, Mar. 15—The German general staff today issued orders to commanders in the field to complete occupation of Bohemia and Moravia by 6 p. m. (noon e. s. t.).

LONDON, Mar. 15—The first detachment of Hungarian troops completed the crossing of Ruthania today, according to an Exchange telegraph dispatch from Warsaw.

The Hungarian patrol contacted Polish troops, stopped on the northern Ruthanian frontier and exchanged "most cordial greetings," the dispatch said.

BERLIN, Mar. 15—Absolute master of central Europe, victor in the third of Nazi Germany's "wars without a shot," Reichsfuehrer Hitler left Berlin today to supervise his military occupations of Bohemia and Moravia.

Tonight, he is expected to take personal charge of Prague, proud and ancient capital of the Bohemia kings.

Coincident with his arrival, the main square of the Moravian city, named after President Wilson, in honor of his post-war efforts to create a new Europe, will be re-christened as "Hitler Square."

Answering his call from the "effected and persecuted" in Czechoslovakia and characterizing his will as one designed, "to remove definitely a menace to peace," the Fuehrer sent hundreds of thousands of swiftly-marching German troops into his new territory.

Following them went six detachments of German storm troopers to occupy the principal buildings of Prague and to pave the way for another triumphal entry for the Fuehrer.

Today was the day Hitler was to have visited Vienna to celebrate with the people of Austria the first anniversary of their annexation by the German Reich. But the last 48 hours changed the whole strategic set-up of European politics, that the Fuehrer found himself with a bigger job on his hands—the amalgamation without conditions or reserve of Bohemia and Moravia into the Nazi regime.

Lower Southampton Club Holds Interesting Session

The largest Republican meeting ever held in Lower Southampton Township, took place Monday evening, March 6, when 225 persons gathered at the Chapel to attend the monthly meeting of the Lower Southampton Republican Association.

Hon. Edward Blester, District Attorney of Bucks County, delivered a very interesting 15-minute address, after which a "Mock Trial" was very well presented by about 22 members and friends of the club, including Sheriff William Stackhouse, of Doylestown; Leroy Smith, of Perkasie; and Horace Meyers, of Doylestown, acting as attorneys and judge. The remaining members took part as jurors, witnesses and court clerk.

This was the first entertainment of this type ever to be given by the club, and it proved very interesting and humorous, everyone taking their part very well. The membership chairman, Phineas Ross, reported 140 members and 16 new members joined at the meeting.

A card party is being planned for a date to be announced later.

At the April 3rd meeting there will be another oral quiz or question bee, and three prizes will be given for highest scores.

Members are requested to bring in their questions at this meeting, which will be put into the question box. Anyone interested in Republicanism is cordially invited to attend the April meeting.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES VOLUNTARY SERVICE PLAN

In Preparation for War, 1,800,000 Men and Women Are Sought; 6,000,000 Reserves

CLASSIFIES POPULATION

(Note: This is the first of a series of three articles discussing Britain's new Voluntary National Service plan.—INS)

By James E. Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Mar. 15—(INS)—Great Britain today is preparing its population for war.

Almost 14,000,000 people have been classified according to their potential military value, and an appeal has been issued for volunteers.

The government originally called for 1,800,000 men and women to join Voluntary National Services, and about 6,000,000 more to fill the "unallocated reserve."

Another 6,000,000 men and women were asked not to volunteer because their normal occupations are so vital to the nation that they can best serve by staying where they are.

The dual object of the Voluntary National Service scheme is to fill the vacancies that exist in the various Defense Forces, military and civil, while safeguarding essential industries and services by avoiding the recruiting of persons who, in the national interest, should be retained in their occupations in wartime.

Every effort is being made in the present campaign to emphasize the idea that those who are required to remain at their ordinary occupations are rendering national aid equally important as the undertaken by volunteers for the various defense services.

There are also various auxiliary services for women, including work connected with the transport and care of children, and work on farms. In the event of war, a Women's Land Army will be organized. It will be a mobile force ready to undertake all kinds of agricultural work in any part of the country. The members will wear uniforms, although they will normally be employed and paid by individual farmers, and the organization will supervise their lodging arrangements and general welfare.

There will also be a need for women able to offer their services only for work near their homes, and they will be accepted as air raid wardens, ambulance drivers and attendants, and as members of the auxiliary fire service.

The registration of doctors willing to volunteer for the medical services which would operate in wartime is being undertaken in co-operation with the British Medical Association. The Ministry of Labor is setting up a central bureau for men and women with professional, scientific, or technical qualifications who would be prepared to do work of a specialist nature.

This bureau would in wartime be used by government departments to meet their needs for additional scientific, technical, and professional staffs. It will be available to aid industrial concerns in a similar way.

Men and women are wanted in large numbers for the various sections of the Air Raid Precautions Service. Most of the volunteers would serve on a part-time basis in wartime and would give such service as they were able. Many, however, would be enrolled for full-time paid service in war and would agree to serve in their home district whenever called on to do so. Volunteers in the Air Raid Precautions Service can transfer from one local authority to another if they change their homes.

The branches of the police service open to recruits are included in the Police War Reserve, an auxiliary force at present confined to London; large numbers of recruits are also wanted for the Auxiliary Fire Service. Men trained in first-aid and ambulance work would be needed in war time for the Air Raid Precautions Service, and arrangements have also been made for women who are willing to take a course of training for nursing in war. There will also be a call for older women who will be employed in non-professional work such as preparing hospital supplies and dressings.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

"My Hobby" was the theme of the meeting of the Langhorne parent-teacher association. The annual affair afforded an expression of local hobbies of all kinds. The high level of craftsmanship attracted much attention and favorable comment.

Moving pictures were shown by Mr. Rossiter, who filmed most of the high school football games last Fall. His technicolor films were very pleasing in their clearness and color reproduction. They were a fine record of some important community activities, including the faculty of the high school, school buses, American Legion band and several football games.

Mr. Jane, also a film enthusiast, exhibited several pictures on travel in Vermont, Lake Champlain and scenes of Mrs. Lindensfelder's garden. Several safety songs were rendered by Mrs. Blanche Hetherington. She sang "Pins Are Dangerous," "Safety on a Bicycle" and "Scissors and Knives Are Dangerous."

Mr. Storm gave a very interesting talk on Indian lore, in which he told of early Indian life and implements. He spoke of the history of the Indians of the East, particularly the powerful Susquehannocks who had subdued all the other tribes in that region.

Many features are planned for the program at the 20th anniversary of the Willet C. Sanford Post, No. 433, American Legion, of Morrisville, to be held Thursday night in the Legion Home, with Commander Harry M. Lair, presiding.

The meeting will be in the form of a past commander's night and each past commander will be called upon for a two-minute talk on his accomplishments as commander. A large birthday cake with 20 candles and decorated with American flags will occupy a prominent place in the meeting room.

The Rev. Frederick Halloran, of Trenton, will be the principal speaker and William Komisky, of the Morrisville Post, will sing several war songs. Every ex-serviceman in Morrisville has been invited.

The Post now has 104 members, which exceeds the quota set by the State Department. Members of the Post will attend the birthday party to be given by Post 93 at Trenton on Tuesday night.

There were 35 members of the Post attending the Ninth District meeting at Willow Grove, sponsored by the 40th S. of Montgomery County.

Corporal W. Paul Snyder, one of the best known members of the old Pennsylvania State Police, has been promoted to the rank of Sergeant in the Pennsylvania Motor Police, according to the Acting Superintendent of Pennsylvania Motor Police.

HIGH SCHOOL "GYM" TEAM WINS TITLE

Takes Championship Honors
In Phila. Sub. Gymnastic
League at Chester

FINAL SCORE IS 41 TO 22

WEST CHESTER, Mar. 15—Winners of the first District One P. I. A. A. symnastic championship three years ago, Bristol High's gymnasts added another "first" to their collection of symnastic titles when they annexed the initial championship of the newly-formed Philadelphia Suburban Gymnastic League as a result of their 41-22 win over West Chester High's acrobats here yesterday afternoon.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Cards which enabled the Bristol boys to close their first league season undefeated to capture the crown as the brief loop campaign was brought to a close with this meet.

Dick Doyle, Bristol's ace gymnast, slipped up on his optional exercise on the parallel bars, and as a result of falling off early, he failed to take first place on that piece for the first and only time this year. In fact it was the only time in a league meet that he has ever been beaten in any piece he has entered.

Lenny Fell, a team mate, was the individual who scored the win over

"Union Signal" Meeting Conducted by W. C. T. U.

A "Union Signal" meeting was held by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Bristol, last evening, at the home of Miss Martha Hughes, 601 Radcliffe street.

Attention was given to this official organ of the national W. C. T. U., which commenced publication in 1883. Several articles were read, which set forth the wide scope of interest in its digest of nation-wide and world-wide news, editorial comment, etc.

One of the most interesting features mentioned is the weekly letter from Dr. Izora Scott, legislative representative in Washington, D. C., reporting Congressional action with specific reference to bills concerning W. C. T. U. interest.

Of especial interest in current issues, and which were mentioned last evening, were reports of honoring of the memory of Frances Willard in her centenary year by members of Congress, Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York, and Senator Sheppard, of Texas, both delivered speeches in Congress, regarding her great work, the latter offering a resolution for issuance of a memorial stamp this year in honor of this great temperance worker. She was honored, by several who paid tribute during Congressional sessions, as one of the greatest pioneer women in the advancement of women and in the protection of the home.

The presiding officer during business was Mrs. Harry H. Headley. Soloist of the evening was Miss Laura Ellis.

The Six Secretaries Idea

Washington, Mar. 14. THE appointment by the President of his handsome military aide, Colonel Watson, to be the principal Presidential secretary has revived interest in the whole question of the White House secretariat. It has, for example, again brought to the front the matter of the six secretaries for whom Mr. Roosevelt asked in the original reorganization bill and who, it was suggested by the sponsors of that controversial measure, should be endowed with a passion for anonymity.

IT will be recalled that originally the reorganization bill was introduced in 1937 and was a companion piece to the Supreme Court

To Vote On Stockham's Bill

HARRISBURG, Mar. 15—(INS)—Faced with the heaviest calendar of the 1939 session, the House today was ready to pass on the bill of Rep. Thomas B. Stockham, R. Bucks, providing that a majority vote, instead of a two-thirds vote, would be necessary in the Senate to oust a member of the Public Utility Commission.

The measure, slated for first reading, would permit the governor to dismiss a member of the commission for political activity. Gov. Arthur H. James already has implied approval of Stockham's bill.

By a vote of 123 to 61, the House sent to the Senate the bill designed to strip the Public Utility Commission of its power to fix gas rates in Philadelphia. Rate-fixing would be vested in the Municipal Gas Commission instead. Rep. Herman J. Tahl, R., Phila., sponsored the proposed act.

Two bills affecting second class townships also were listed on today's calendar.

One bill would appropriate $8,500,000 from the motor license fund in 1940-1941 for use on rural roads; the other provides for the return to the townships of the unexpended balance of the 1937 appropriation, estimated by legislators at approximately $4,500,000.

FORMING BOYS' CLUB FOR YOUTH OF PARISH

Men of St. Mark's Church Plan
Organization for Young Men and Boys

With visions of many evenings spent in developing physically, cementing finer friendships, and widening their sphere of knowledge through reading of good books, the boys and young men of St. Mark's parish are to band themselves into a Catholic Boys Club.

Already 100 of the youth of the parish have been enrolled, the ages being from 12 to 18 years.

Fine quarters for the club are being refurbished, some equipment has been donated and other pieces promised, and dreams are already forming for an athletic field.

This will not be a one-night-a-week plan, but the club quarters will be open every night in the week between the hours of six and 10.30 o'clock.

The men of St. Mark's are backing the movement, and are securing fine co-operation from the future club members. Arthur P. Brady, Wood street and Jefferson avenue, is chairman of the committee in charge; with James O'Brien, Bath street, as secretary; and Neal McDevitt, Pine street, as chairman of the advisory board. The Rev. Father Albert Glass is to be the chaplain.

The club-rooms, which are the center of attraction already for 100 lads, will soon be the mecca for several hundred young men, it is believed, as they bend their way there on whatever free evenings they have. In the quarters, which are located in the basement of St. Mark's school, four sections have been partitioned. In the one will be located a basketball court. In another gymnasium apparatus is to be placed, the third will be the library where a variety of fine books will be located, and the fourth will be used for table tennis and other games.

Just now workmen are busy with their tools, repapering and repainting. The pipes are being bronzed; and paper, paint and labor of the men have been donated.

A radio is among the donations, and a motion picture projector is promised for use of the club.

When the big night for opening arrives, it will mean that thereafter the boys will have use of the quarters every night of the week, with men of the parish supervising the activities.

Self-governing will the lads be, for next Sunday evening they will meet to elect officers. Thereafter business meetings are to occur on the second and fourth Sunday evenings of each month.

The recreation field which is part of the plans is much in the thoughts of the lads these days. It is expected that the field might be located on Pine street. There they will take part in baseball, football, and track events in season.

St. Mark's parish members who form the committee in charge, state that there are several hundred boys within the ages of 12 and 18 in the parish, and a large and active club is expected to soon reach fruition.

TELLS OF DUTIES OF DISTRICT ATTORNEY IN ADDRESS HERE

Arthur M. Eastburn, Esq., Delivers Informative Address
To Republican Women

CITES QUALIFICATIONS

Speaker Says District Attorney
Must Be 'Hard Boiled' and Sympathetic Also

That a district attorney must be "hard-boiled to a certain extent, and sympathetic to a certain extent" were among the qualifications listed for filling that office which former district attorney of Bucks County, Arthur M. Eastburn, gave last evening, when he spoke to members of Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women on "The Duties of the District Attorney."

Considerable enlightenment on the duties of that office was given in the half hour address, and the 45 women and their guests, men of the section, who met in the Travel Club Home, were somewhat surprised when Mr. Eastburn, who served in that capacity for 12 years, informed that "I regard the routine and office work as the most important duty that comes before the district attorney. For the advice and information that is sought of him during those periods by countless people is surprising, and if the district attorney can advise those people wisely and sympathetically, and lighten their burdens, he has done a good job."

"A district attorney must be hard-boiled to a certain extent, and sympathetic to a certain extent." In regard to the prevalence of crime among the youth, and in telling that the greater number of cases of crime before the courts involves those under 22 years of age, Mr. Eastburn struck a timely note when he had this to say: "Those groups and organizations which are trying to instill high ideals into the youth of today, should be encouraged by all of us. They are doing a big work." He had high praise for the Boy Scout movement, and stated that he is of the opinion that the junior police activity which is now being organized in Bucks County will be a big factor in moulding the young men.

The men and women assembled were told at the outset of the speech that the office of the district attorney is not a constitutional one, but that it is statutory, being provided for by act of the general assembly. The meagre duties which the act provides for were outlined.

Some consideration was given to the misconception on the part of the public as to what the duties of the district attorney cover. "Some people think that the district attorney not only tries cases in court, but that he is a kind of glorified detective or police officer." The countless calls from many who were annoyed by operation of a speedway in the county on Sundays; the impelling insistence from others when strikes occurred, etc., were called. "These things do not come under the jurisdiction of the district attorney, but the public looks to him to do something about them." In speaking of court cases Mr. Eastburn advised that "the district attorney's office has to do only with the prosecution of criminal offenses." He then told how the cases get into court after an individual has entered complaint before a justice of the peace, how bail is

WAR REFERENDUM SENTIMENT

Distrust of the war referendum as a peace insurance measure grows in the public mind. For the fourth consecutive year, a "scientific" straw vote in surveys has asked the question, "Should the Constitution be changed to require Congress to obtain approval of the people in a national vote before the United States could take part in a war overseas?"

In 1936 the decision was 71 per cent in favor of the proposition. Each year since the majority has lessened. This year the vote was 58 per cent "Yes."

Certainly this is no indication of a changed will for peace. It means in part, probably, that the people believe that in any great emergency the Government should have power to act promptly.

World experience also has demonstrated that a state of war may exist without declaration. Therefore an Administration either confronted with conditions requiring defense or aggression, or bent on producing such conditions, would not be effected by a Constitutional provision requiring a referendum. The result of a referendum conducted after the nation was engaged in an undeclared war, would not be doubtful. The people would back their Government.

Accordingly, force of public opinion favoring peace must be exerted well in advance of overt acts of war. The best safeguard of peace is the peaceful intent of a large majority of the people made known to their representatives in the Government.

SINGLE DOSE OF MATH

The grammar school graduate who enters high school peers at the first pages of the algebra and geometry books with much the same feeling as one about to take the first plunge into the cold waters of an unfamiliar lake, and frequently with disastrous results.

In order to overcome this hazard, the New York schools have broken away from the traditional methods of teaching mathematics and are introducing geometry on the elementary level. Arithmetic algebra and geometry are "scrambled" and integrated as one subject in the hope that pupils will be guided more gently and successfully along the way to knowledge of the higher mathematics.

The plan is being tried in the seventh grade and is only experimental. Instead of using vague symbols, the new syllabus takes examples from the geometry of everyday life, the squares and triangles and spheres which are familiar objects. The purpose of the new system is to develop ability to interpret and master the simple mathematical situations met by the average person in home or business and to cultivate independence of thought and the habit of verifying conclusions.

Mathematics is a high hurdle for many pupils. The New York experiment will be closely observed by educators. If it works out well enough to cut down the average of student failures in this field, it will revolutionize the high school system, is the prediction of the sponsors of the new idea.

Harrisburg, Mar. 15—Pennsylvania's controversial full crew law, requiring additional brakemen on passenger trains and freight crews was declared unconstitutional today by the Dauphin County court.

Judge John E. Fox, in a 24 page opinion, ruled that the measure, passed by the Erie administration in 1937, was "arbitrary and unreasonable."

The full crew bill has been the center of opposition from 49 railroads and affiliates since it was passed.

The opinion authorized a permanent injunction against the act which already had been virtually nullified by the extended litigation. The railroads, led chiefly by the Pennsylvania Railroad, contended that the additional cost to the carrier with the full crew would exceed $4,500,000 annually.

The Great Game of Politics

NOH has it escaped attention that, while in many respects the bill which Senator Byrd, the real pioneer in the reorganization movement, has introduced, is similar to the House bill, there is in it no reference to the six secretaries. In other words, it is quite clear that this time there will be no general acceptance of the six. The former Senatorial attitude of "Oh, well, if he says he needs six more secretaries let him have 'em" has changed. Instead there is reason to believe that unless a personal fight is made by the President, they will not be provided, and no surety at all that they will be provided if he does. The reasons are clear.

IN the first place, it is pointed out, in the new Senate bill one of the real aims is proclaimed as economy, whereas economy was specifically not one of the aims of the President's 1937 proposals. In any reorganization seeking economy it is obviously inconsistent to create six new Presidential secretaries, each of whom inevitably would require personal secretaries, clerks, stenographers and offices, thus running expenses far above the mere $50,000 for their salaries. Practically, it would amount to establishing a new department—or, at least, a new bureau. The whole purpose of reorganization is to simplify, reduce and retrain. The six-secretaries proposal goes in the exact opposite direction and there is no possible excuse for acquiescing unless the need is clear and their duties specified.

NEITHER ONE OF THESE things has been done. ON the contrary, it is difficult for anyone to see how these Six Selfless Secretaries would operate without interfering with Cabinet and department heads and themselves. Possibly they might be used for keeping on the pay roll the Messrs. Corcoran, Cohen and others of the so-called "inner circle" who function as Presidential advisers and are now paid by the RFC, the AAA, the FWA and other agencies where they serve more or less irregularly and irrelevantly. Otherwise it is not easy to think who would fill these places and what they would do.

FOR another thing, it is pointed out that no issue of being grudging or niggardly toward the President can now be raised because even if the six secretaries were provided, they would be of little use to Mr. Roosevelt. By the time they could be gotten into operation, he would be so close to the end of his second term that they would have no real value. He wouldn't have time to think up things for them to do. Certainly, his successor in the White House ought to be allowed to say whether or not he wanted six secretaries in addition to the four already provided. He very easily might not want them at all. The next President may have wholly different ideas about these things. He may not even have an "inner circle" or a Brain Trust. At any rate it seems fairly sure that a strong effort will be made in the Senate this time to eliminate the six-secretaries idea on the ground that the need is doubtful and the idea inconsistent with the primary purpose of the bill.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD—So infrequent a party-giver is Barbara Stanwyck that the papers wouldn't believe her big soiree of Saturday night was merely to honor the birthday of her agent, Zeppo Marx. They suspected an announcement of the Stanwyck-Taylor wedding date and some of the city desks spent the night checking the Cafe Lamaze.

Robert Taylor finally had to get on the phone and swear on a stack of Bibles that nothing of the kind was going to happen.

"Twas certainly a gala affair. Bob Hope told jokes, Bing Crosby sang, Jack Benny fiddled and Fred MacMurray played the saxophone.

Out-of-towners, who happened to pick last week-end to tour the night clubs in search of stars, really had themselves a time. Down the street at Marcel's—grouped at one table—were Marlene Dietrich, Madeleine Carroll and Hedy Lamarr.

You can lay a small bet that, when "Gone With the Wind" resumes, the new director, Victor Fleming, will start again from scratch.

Death of Captain Pat Roark from a polo injury not only saddened Hollywood, where he was well known, but has made some of our stars see the studio's side of the argument about the hazardous game. Spencer Tracy has it in his contract that M-G-M can't bar polo, but now he voluntarily will sell six of his ponies, retaining only two and these mainly for exercising purposes on the quarter-mile track that he is building on his ranch.

A certain actor, relates Jimmy Stewart, reported for his first day's work under Director W. S. Van Dyke. By 4 p. m., he had made about 15 scenes and was groggy from Van's dizzy shooting pace.

Timidly, he approached the assistant director.

"May I have a minute off to wash my hands?" he asked.

"Sure, go ahead," said the assistant, "we'll shoot around you."

M-G-M will think twice before they send another baby elephant on location. Bee, the pint-size pachyderm which accompanied the "Tarzan in Exile" troupe to Florida, had to have a special baggage car which cost as much as 22 round trip tickets. They had to swing the elephant from a hammock device so he wouldn't do nip-ups when the train lurched. Electric heaters had to be installed in the car and special kitchen equipment so that Trainer George Emerson could properly prepare his charge's oatmeal, rice and sweetened milk. A man had to be hired to act as chambermaid and someone had to sit up with the elephant 24 hours of the day.

Couldn't help smiling at Shirley Temple's mama the other night at the Academy ball—when Shirley and Walt Disney were posing for the newsmags.

Mrs. Temple looked at her famous offspring—out there in front of the lights, smiling gayly on demand, taking direction from half a dozen people—and said feelingly: "I don't know how she does it. I'd faint from fright."

Sally O'Neill and Tommy Guinan staged a lulu of a row at one of the late spots. . . But they'll kiss and make up. They always do. . . Mrs. Jack Haley is going east to sell the family estate at Mahopac. She and Jack had lived in it only 10 days when he got the call to come to Hollywood. They've never been back and the place has been unoccupied for five years. . . Add to strange sights: Velez and Yolanda, supreme exponents of romantic and graceful dancing, leading the Latin snake dance at La Conga. They're appearing at the Coconut Grove. . . which means you'll find the film folk there these evenings. . . Dorothy Ates working at M-G-M in "It's a Wonderful World." She was sick for so long but is feeling fine now. . . Hollywood was particularly glad to see Oliver March win the academy award for his color photography in "Sweethearts." Oliver has photographed all of filmdom's famous beauties. Marion Davies liked his work so well that she had Warner Brothers borrow him. . . There'll be no round-the-world trip after all for Preston Foster. He's using the money to buy a new boat.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER I

YOUNG Doctor Arden was going through the process of reorienting himself after a night's sleep. He had been doing that now for two weeks. He would open his eyes, gaze for a second or two at his strange surroundings, and then close them again. The wide brass bed with the sagging springs became the narrow one of his hospital bedroom; the telephone beside the bed would ring at any moment, and he would have to hurry into his clothes and go, half-awake, to the slow old elevator with the ancient colored Joe inside.

"Let me off at the corner of the park, Joe. Got to meet a lady."

"Yes, sir," Joe would say, grinning.

It was an old joke between them, out for Joe it had never lost its humor.

The elevator would rise with deliberation. It was an open cage, and there would be vistas of long bare halls, poorly lighted, and of tired night nurses waiting hopefully for the dawn, or of convalescents from the wards, in hospital trousers or loose wrappers, shuffling along in carpet slippers for this purpose or that.

Then somewhere the elevator would stop, and he would step out, a tall, disreputable figure, to find an anxious nurse waiting for him.

"It's Baird in D ward, Doctor. Her temperature's been dropping since three o'clock."

For a little time then he would be king. More, he would be a god of sorts; nurses hurrying to obey his orders, the ward watching him with interest, and perhaps some feeble lie hanging on his quickness, his skill.

"Tray here?"

"Yes, Doctor."

"All right, Baird. This will make you feel better."

He would stand or sit by the bed, holding to a wrist, watching the rise and fall of a chest. His world always sharply contracted at such times. It consisted only of the patient on the bed and himself, with a nurse hovering by. But sometimes, especially if the call came early in his sleep, he acted by a sort of automatism. He would go through the proper motions, but in the morning he would hardly remember. There might be an empty bed in a ward, the patient gone and the mattress rolled up on the wire springs, ready for sterilizing. It would come to him then with a shock that he had seen a human soul pass on the night before and had gone back to bed and forgotten it.

"Well, you did all you could, Doctor."

"I wonder!" he would say, and feel the eyes of the ward on him.

All day he would have a sense of guilt. Then it would pass. By evening, in the internes' room, he would be drinking a surreptitious glass of beer and saying: "Nothing to do with that fellow in A. Came on too late. Who wants some beer?"

But it was not quite so easy as that. He had a bad habit of going back over his cases. The poker game would start; some of the internes, Scott, the X-ray man, and perhaps Dickinson from the laboratory.

Sometimes six were playing, sometimes only two were left to mark time. But there would be times when his mind wandered back to some empty bed in the silent hospital overhead.

"Wake up, Chris! What are you so glum about?"

His name, which was Noel, had been altered by some wag to Christmas, and from that to Chris.

"Sorry. I'll check the bed."

It would pass, he knew. In a few hours or a day he would have forgotten. His big heavy-shouldered figure would once more move with assurance into the wards, and once more at times he would be king or even God to his small domain. He would whistle in the corridors and make his little jokes in the wards.

"Hold still now. This is going to hurt you more than it hurts me! Or: 'Kick with that leg? Sure you will. You've been kicking ever since you came in here!'"

There would be a triumphant swing to his shoulders under the white coat when at last the dressings were done and the wards quiet. He would change his soiled coat for a fresh one, light a cigarette, stop to chat with a nurse.

"Well, I suppose you were out dancing last night!"

"Dancing! I've got other uses for my feet."

"Well, they're very nice feet," he would say, and wander on cheerfully.

But there were many times when he felt that he had failed. Sometimes when the screens would be up around the bed, he would be alone with the patient, just the two of ing, promising to come back often. Then at last he heard the big front doors close behind him and knew that he was through with that phase of his life and that he was at last alone in a not too friendly world.

He was fully awake now. He opened his eyes, yawned, and stretched, and as he did so a brass ball from the top of the bed fell down and struck him sharply on the head. His reaction was instant and indignant. He caught it up and flung it across the room, and the resultant clamor broke the Sunday morning calm like an explosion. When it had subsided, he heard slow them, and it would seem strange to him that one of them was going on into death and the other back to a warm room and to sleep. It seemed unfair. He felt ashamed then of his vitality, and of the fact that when it was over, he meant to see if there was anything left from the night nurses' supper.

Dr. Arden grunted and turned over. He was slowly awaking now, beginning to remember. That last night in the hospital, for instance. He had made his final rounds at midnight, saying a sort of mute farewell to all familiar things. Shabby and old as it was, he had loved every corner of it. Here and there in the wards a patient had been awake, and he had stood by the bed in the semidarkness.

"Sorry you're going, Doctor. We'll miss you."

"Sorry to go, old man."

But it was in the children's ward that he had remained the longest. A small girl there was crying, and he had gone in and picked her up.

"What's the matter, sweetheart? Can't you sleep?"

"I want my mother."

He had wrapped a blanket around her, and she stopped crying. Always in that ward he felt helpless and filled with pity. These little waifs and strays—the hospital gave them care, but it could not give them love. He held her closer in his arms.

"If I sit down with you, will you go to sleep?"

"I'll try."

So he had sat down with her on one of the hard ward chairs, and after a time she had fallen asleep. Somewhere ahead of him lay the future, unknown and mysterious; but somewhere and someday, God willing, there would be in it some quiet room, and like this he would be holding in his arms a child of his own.

That had been his real farewell to the hospital, although he made a formal one the next day, going cheerfully, shaking hands, laugh-

"To what do you attribute your success?" we asked the great industrialist, J. Wellington Whoosh, as he paused in the process of endowing another college and a couple of art museums. He smiled reminiscently.

"I worked hard, banked my money, and always read the advertisements!"

Far-fetched? Of course. But it's a good-humored way of calling your attention to a serious fact: Intelligent reading of the advertising pages will save you time and money.

A mystery so bewildering that it has to be solved twice is the situation facing the Roving Reporters, Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler, in their latest escapade. "While New York Sleeps," 20th Century-Fox's thriller of murder at midnight in Manhattan, due to open today at the Grand Theatre.

From all reports it would seem that Messrs. Whalen and Chandler, aided by lovely Jean Rogers, who scored in "Time Out For Murder," have really got themselves into a jam this time. They've caught the killer before the killing, printed the story before it happens and then are embarrassed no end to find the same man murdered again!

"While New York Sleeps" starts out innocently enough with Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler getting away from it all by starting for a month's vacation in the country. They're hardly inside the cottage door when the telephone rings and the city editor of the newspaper breaks the news that Steve Martin, insurance detective and friend of Whalen's, has committed suicide.

The boys hurry back to the city, jump into the middle of the case, and set about proving that Martin has really been murdered.

It isn't a very simple thing to prove and with the police department, the underworld and their own newspaper against them, the Roving Reporters find their necks in a noose.

COMING FRIDAY:
"TRADE WINDS"

Mr. Williams, who is located at Penna. State College, explained the three methods of testing, advanced registry, which is the oldest, cow testing and the herd improvement.

In order to carry on the combination testing of cow-testing and advanced registry, it would be necessary for the Bucks breeders to employ a college tester.

There is a similar organization now being carried on in Chester county.

"The two purposes of every purebred breeder are to make a record in milk production and the sale of surplus stock," said Mr. Williams.

"Advanced registry records," Mr. Williams explained, "are necessary to sell pure bred stock to the best advantage."

In the new combination group, all breeds are eligible.

"The extra cost is justified," said Mr. Williams who discussed at length testing by preliminary milkings.

Making a survey of the breeders represented, President Hunsberger discovered that the greatest number of dairymen present were Guernsey, next Jersey, and then Holstein.

County Agent William F. Greenawalt, who called the meeting, said some breeders who were not present expressed interest in the movement.

STEINKE TO ATTEMPT TO SUBDUED PENCHOFF

TRENTON, Mar. 15.—The toughest test of strength, stamina and skill is scheduled to take place at the Arena tonight when Hans Steinke, powerful German-American, will attempt to pin both George Penchoff, newest popular lid, and Babe Zaharias, tough Colorado Greek, in one hour or forfeit the contest.

Steinke, rated one of the foremost grapplers in the game, has so impressed local fandom with his prowess when he defeated Karl Davis, Bilber McCoy and Chief Sanooka, that the fans asked Promoter Johnny Ipp to put Steinke to a real test. Ipp got Hans' assent but had difficulty lining up two opponents. However, Penchoff and Zaharias finally came to terms and the test of the big German's ability will be severely tried.

Penchoff has never been pinned here. He scored the longest fall recorded in Trenton, forcing Zaharias to surrender in 88 minutes of the classic grappling seen here in a long time. Babe is a mat ruffian from the word go and has been disqualified for his rowdy tactics more than any other wrestler who has ever appeared here.

Sander Szabo, the handsome Hungarian idol, will face tough Al Sparks, recent British Empire tournament winner, in the semi-feature. Two newcomers with established reputations, Dr. John "Dropkick" Murphy, platinum blonde Irishman, and Maurice LaChapelle, speedy and clever Frenchman, will face Ace Gordon, New England speedster and Angelo Leone, fiery and crowd-baiting Italian, in the one hour, one fall time limit matches.

It is the most attractive card presented at the Arena in some time and the ticket selling is indicative of the interest of the fans. The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m.

DODGERS A GOOD CLUB IN EVERY RESPECT

By James L. Kilgallen (I. N. S. Sports Writer)

CLEARWATER, Fla., Mar. 15.—(INS)—Colorful Larry MacPhail, dynamic general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, peered at his array of players working out under a broiling sun today and said his 1939 club is "a good one in every respect but the pitching staff."

Both he and the sturdy chap with No. "2" on the back of his uniform—manager Leo Durocher—promised that the Dodgers will be "an interesting team" to watch.

Brooklyn, according to MacPhail, has "the best infield in the league" and an outfield that "can outrun and out-throw any in the league." He claimed that the club has improved in every position.

The infield that will go to the post at the opening bell will be Babe Phelps behind the bat, Dolph Camilli at first, Harry Lavagetto at third, Durocher at short, and either Pete Coscarart, Tony Lazzeri or Johnny Hudson at second.

The first string outfield probably will be Ernie Key in left, George Stainback in center and Gene Moore in right. All three are fast.

You should hear MacPhail talk about his Dodgers. Nobody seems to believe they are going anywhere but MacPhail gives the impression he's going to have a winning team or bust.

MacPhail, red-headed and blunt-talking, is the man who took over a seventh-place club last year that was running in "the red" and to the delight of the bankers, put it in "the black." In addition he spent $240,000 for players, $100,000 for a lighting system and doped up the ball park. The Dodgers finished third in league attendance and came out in "the black" for the first time since 1932.

Only when he discussed his pitching staff did MacPhail's voice lack conviction. He has fourteen pitchers in the camp, only four of whom were on the Dodgers' roster last spring. They deliver for MacPhail—"or else."

The five best pitching bets are Luke Hamlin, who won 12 and lost 15 last season; the aging Freddie Fitzsimmons, whose record was 11 won, eight lost last year; southpaw Vitautas Tamulis who won 12 and lost six for the Dodgers last season after he was purchased from the Browns; Ira Hutchinson who won nine and lost eight with the Boston Bees last year, and John Wyatt, who compiled a sensational 23 won, seven lost with Milwaukee last season.

Durocher's ideas regarding the 1939 Dodgers coincided with MacPhail's, regarding who will play second base, the only job open in the infield. Like MacPhail he is inclined to think it will be Coscarart at the Keystones sack but it may be the veteran Tony Lazzeri whom MacPhail got from the Chicago Cubs. Lazzeri, now 34, looks fit and will come in mighty handy because of his experience and known ability to hit.

Durocher himself may be the big question mark on the team because, like Lazzeri, he is getting along in years. Durocher brushes such a suggestion aside with the remark: "I've been in the majors only 12 years."

The reserve strength of the Dodgers, in the opinion of both MacPhail and Durocher, is far superior to last season.

"Of the forty I brought down last year I have only 12 left in that bunch working out. That's a fast turn-over."

Brooklyn has a great "brain trust" with two ex-big league managers as coaches. They are Charlie Dressen and Bill Killefer, two of the smartest men in the business.

High School "Gym" Team Wins Title

Doyle, Fell had a score of 47.5 to Doyle's 42. Nevertheless, Fell had a fine exercise and well deserved the score he made.

Doyle took second on the parallels and since he won his other favorite event, the horizontal bar, he scored eight points to share the individual scoring honors of the day with Joe Karr, who also took a first and second for eight points. As a result of scoring 8 points in this meet, Doyle brought his season's total up to 36 in the four meets for an average of 9 points per meet. Although the figures haven't been tabulated as yet, it is believed that this is high single total for the year.

Joe Karr took first on the rings and second in tumbling to score his eight points, while Fell's third in tumbling gave him six points for the day. Bill Campbell won the horse event while Wilbur Van Lente again took first in swinging the Indian clubs to give Bristol five firsts in the meet.

The only two first places gained by the home club were scored in the tumbling and rope climb events. Bill Fessenbecker won the tumbling rather easily with over a 15 point margin, while Lawrence Pryor's fast time of 5.4 in the rope climb enabled him to win that event by nearly a full second. George Hoge placed in two events, the horse and rope climb, to score four points for his team.

GAMES TONIGHT

The preliminary playoffs that precede the championships in the Langhorne Community League will be played tonight starting at 7.45 p. m., at the Croydon Skating Rink. In the first game, the Mill Street Boys' Club will tangle with the Siles A. C., and in the second tussle the Langhorne Red Raiders meet the South Langhorne Union five representing the Enterprise Wallpaper Company.

New York, Mar. 15.—A man who had registered at the Hotel New Yorker as F. H. E. Elder, of Philadelphia, plunged to his death today from the window of his 39th floor room.

His body landed on the roof of a five-story extension of the hotel. He had been a guest at the hotel since Monday.

Warsaw, Mar. 15.—The Polish government today accorded official recognition to the new independent state of Slovakia. The Warsaw government sent its recognition to Bratislava telegraphically, and announced the appointment of a diplomatic representative.

London, Mar. 15.—The British government has instructed Sir Neville Henderson, its Ambassador in Berlin, to "ascertain Germany's intention regarding Czechoslovakia." It was authoritatively learned today.

The cabinet decided to permit a full debate of the Czech situation in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The impression grew in both British and French circles that the new development in the Central European situation had been engineered by Hitler and Mussolini partially to divert attention from the intensifying Anglo-French friendship.

Tells of Duties of District Attorney in Address Here

specified if a prima facie case is shown, etc.

In speaking of the grand jury and its work, the Doylestown resident had this to say: "In my opinion, in many ways the grand jury has outlived its usefulness in Pennsylvania. There is a duplication of activity." He then told that it is the province of the grand jury to weed out cases that come up from the justices of the peace to the court, bills of indictment being thrown out for those cases which should not have been sent to the court. Regarding this procedure and what it entails, Mr. Eastburn gave as his opinion "The district attorney could use his discretion on such cases just as well as the grand jury does." "But one function of the grand jury in which it is a very useful adjunct of the law, is in the investigation of an alleged crime, it having power to bring in witnesses and hear evidence under oath that may warrant placing people on trial."

That provision may be made in the new criminal code to permit the district attorney and judge to make comment on the failure of a defendant to take the stand for cross-examination, was one point brought up. This is to be desired, in the opinion of the speaker, who stated that jurymen find it difficult to understand that the district attorney and judge are prohibited by law to make comment on this apparent weakness on the part of the defendant. In the first eight years of his service in that office, stated Mr. Eastburn, there were over 20 murder cases, and dozens and dozens of instances of arson, with the number dropping to practically nothing in the last four years of his term of office. In conclusion he told the Council of Republican Women that "during the 12 years I served as district attorney there was no attempt made by anyone to bring pressure or politics to bear on the office. That speaks well for the people of Bucks County."

The presiding officer last evening was Mrs. Minerva Epstein, president of the council. During the opening exercises, Mrs. Benjamin Lesseig led in the salute to the flag; and Mrs. John Moyer was pianist as the gathering sang "America." The committee in charge of the Martha Washington party was discharged with thanks by the president. Minutes were read by Mrs. Walter Cooper; and treasurer's report given by Mrs. Moyer. The duties of the membership committee were outlined by Mrs. Epstein.

Miss Anna Hawkes gave a splendid report of the session of the state legislature. She told of Governor James' difficulty with his appointments; the proposed amendments to the Teacher Tenure Act; of the bill introduced to replace the present Board of Pardoners; and in regard to question of a new charter sought for Philadelphia stated "We are glad we live in Bucks County." After giving consideration to many of the problems that beset the new governor she added "Against great odds our governor is trying to solve the economic situation."

A card party is planned for next Tuesday evening in the Travel Club home, chairman of the same being Mrs. Rex Hunter. A membership drive was mentioned, the president suggesting that each member secure as a "birthday gift" for the council, which will be one year old in May, a new member. During that month a birthday party for present and new members is to be arranged.

Addressing the meeting briefly Mrs. John W. Cooper, Pineville, president of Bucks County Council of Republican Women, said she would not be surprised if the council in this section might soon be much bigger than the parent council. Mrs. Cooper aided in organizing the Lower Bucks County Council. Last evening she suggested for possible study by the women the reciprocal trade agreements, deriding the fact that much goods is imported from other countries, the farmers in the United States being paid at the same time for not raising the same products. "The way we can aid is to buy American wherever possible, and aid our American industry wherever we can."

The meeting on April 11th will be a welfare meeting it was stated, with socialized medicine, and the hospitalization plans being considered.
